CD DELAYS

UK publishers who are poised to release CDI and CDTV games have been advised, in some cases, to hold fire.

This is because both Philips and Commodore are of the opinion that it is going to take longer to sell enough units to warrant releasing software than had originally been predicted.

The recession is being blamed although the current strength and popularity of consoles must be an

At present the games available and destined for CD release are previous 16bit titles such as Prince of Persia and Sim City. However, Domark looks set to release the excellent Trivial Pursuit.

SIDE POCKET

Side Pocket, widely predicted to be the definitive Pool simulation on console, is being produced for Game Gear.

There's a unique hand and cue icon which enables you to aim the shot. Side Pocket comprises of two different pool games; 9-ball and pocket play both viewed from an overhead perspective.

Side Pocket will be available in May on Mega Drive and Game Gear, published by Data East.

ATOMIC RUNNER

Electric whips and energy boomerangs abound in Atomic Runner. This is a graphically explosive scroll and blast which makes the best of a nuclear holocaust ames-X can reveal first and General control of the sequel to the sequel to Millennium's James Pond. We last saw our fish-like hero in the guise of Robocod; mean, green and part machine.

Now designers Chris Sorrel and game veteran Steve Bak have transfered the eternal fight against the evil Dr Maybe into space. Here the crazed quack is plotting his most despicable deeds yet, from a moonbase lair.

So, can you possibly guess what paradoxical guise James Pond will adopt in this space fiasco? Yep, Splash Gordon! At present ol' tin gills is in the cosmetic surgery having a flaxen blonde syrup stitched on his scaly bonce, while his gran knits him a red jersey with a fetching lightning strike motif.

Splash Gordon will be released on Amiga, ST and Mega Drive in autumn.

The radiation has somehow given a Russian scientist super-human powers. As a result he sets of on a one-man crusade against the ugliest bunch of post-Armaggedon mutants you're ever likely to see.

Visually the game is spectacular, but the gameplay is like 100 scrollers you've played before. Also there are many elements, such as weaponry and characterization, that you will have seen countless times. Nevertheless you'll find Atomic Runner a bloomin' good blast and no mistake. To be released on Mega Drive in July.

THE TOMATO GAME

Has Psygnosis lost its marbles? Following on from the chart-topping success of Lemmings, the Liverpoolbased software mogul is in the process of writing the strange Tomato Game.

As a squeezable tom you'll have to make your way across numerous trapridden levels, avoiding any objects that may cause you to split your sides.

You can use a variety of goodies to help you with your mission; fans, trampolines and even the odd jack-in-thebox. Have you got what it takes to steer a tomato to success within a strict time limit? Find out in September with The Tomato Game from Psygnosis.

RETURN OT THE TIGER

First there was Way of the Tiger, then came Avenger, now Gremlin Graphics is rumoured to be working on an Amiga version of The Return Of The Tiger.

A spokesperson declined to make any comment about the rumour, except to mention it might be true. We'll let you know more as soon as we find out.

TWO CRUDE

he appetite for big-sprite beat'em-ups on consoles seems insatiable at the moment, with a streetwise fisticuff title released almost every other week.

Two Crude Dudes is a very typical city brawl, which will be available on Mega Drive in February, with a Game Gear version expected in the summer.

It is set in post-holocaust New York where a twisted scientist has recruited 100 of the most desperate and evil terrorists who are armed with the most destructive weaponry. They are in the process of looting what's left of the flattened city.

Your task in the game is to confront and eliminate each and every one of these beasts. Subtle it ain't!

CASINOS OF THE WORLD

A II the fun of the most entertaining gambling pursuits without losing your money. Accolade is set to publish a wad of gambling games in one collection entitled Casinos of the World.

Designed by Capstone, the package includes Vegas Gambler, full of fast action and big pay outs on both the fruities and video poker. There's also blackjack tables and roulette, where the There's also blackjack tables and roulette, where the stakes are raised somewhat. In contrast, Monte Carlo Baccarat concentrates on the gentler, more technical pursuit of baccarat chemin de fer.

Then it's an eight hour flight on the 'red eye' to catch the action in Atlantic City. Here you'll find Trump Castle, which features blackjack, roulette, craps, video poker as well as slot machines.

Casinos of the World will be released on PC first, priced at £34.99, with Amiga versions expected sometime in the autumn.

KNIGHTMARE

Need a guide to escort you through your Knightmare? The oh so talented king of adventure, Tony Crowther, has been penning a book to help even the least gifted adventurer. The book is nearing completion and will be published soon through Mindscape.

LEANDER II

After the well-deserved success of Leander, Psygnosis is reported to be developing Leander II. Pencilled in for a Christmas review, the game is still in very early stages of development.

The game should be very similar to the first but will almost certainly involve more puzzle solving. Watch this space!

maxis is set to release Simant. A game putting you in command of an ant colony out to conquer a suburban house.

In any one campaign you'll directly control one ant and supervise up to 1,500 workers and soldiers. You'll be issuing orders such as gather food, dig new tunnels and care for eggs.

Building a huge population is the key to overcoming rival red ants, spiders, ant lions and other dangers.

It will be released through Ocean Software on the PC with an Amiga version following later.

SIM CITY GRAPHICS

Are you tired of the same old Sim City graphics? Well now you have the chance to get your hands on six different styles. How do you fancy being the mayor in a Wild West town? How about running your own moon colony?

The six scenarios are Ancient Asia, medieval times, Wild West, future USA, future Europe and moon colony. The Sim City Graphics will be available for the Amiga and PC.

We don't know who will be distributing the packs in Britain but we'll let you know as soon as we find out.

AMIGA LINKS

A ccess Software and its UK representatives have announced their intention to release the golfing game, Links on the Amiga.

A runaway hit on the PC, the Amiga version of Links will feature the HAM (hold and modify) graphics mode, allowing oodles of colours to be displayed on screen.

Although Links looks superb the courses take ages to draw themselves, and although it's still very early the programmers are still not too sure whether to drop the 4,096 colour mode in return for a quicker update. It is scheduled for released by US Gold sometime in April.

JORDAN VS BIRD

rguably the two greatest basketball players of all time, Michael Jordan and Larry Bird have collaborated on a classic one-on-one basketball challenge.

The game, due for release on the Master System next month, has actually been designed by the king dunkers. Their famous moves have been recreated with some very realistic animation, and the large sprites give a more realistic and spectacular effect. The jaunty 3D angle of perspective during play further enhances the gameplay.

See if you can beat Michael Jordan's record of baskets – 25 in 60 seconds! Great basketball action to be released in March.

ON THE SHELF!

Here is a list which has been compiled by GX, with the help of Centresoft and Leisuresoft, to keep you up to date with all the games which will be hitting the shops in the coming week.

There may be some changes to the release dates of some of the games but keep an eye on the shelves, these games shouldn't be too far behind the date indicated.

Ooh! All 1 meg Amiga owners are in for a treat. Amiga Project X is quite possibly the nearest thing we are likely to see to an arcade machine on the Amiga!

On paper some of the ideas must have looked a touch ambitious but. regardless, everything has been pulled off to perfection.

Obviously this is going to be labelled as being 'just another shoot'em-up', but you can't help but be impressed with the result.

I can't find a fault with the game presentation-wise; the graphics are superb with the rocks looking extremely real and the various enemies are excellently drawn and animated.

Even the three craft you control are animated well and move superbly around the screen.

However, all this is surpassed by the superb parallax effect on the bonus stages that appear between levels. This literally has to be seen to be believed!

The sound is amazing with tons of speech. You are warned about everything, such as volcanos and jutting rocks, that may pose a threat, while the music jangles along nicely

This, coupled with various samples of explosions and blasting, makes the game sound superb and each level boasts new delights for your ears.

On level three in particular you can hear a dragon snoring off screen but when you reach it, it will wake up and begin to roar at you.

Normally when a game is this well presented it is let down severely by the gameplay, just look at Dragon's Lair! Well, you'll be pleased to learn that Project X is every bit as good to play as it is to look at.

All the craft are excellent to manoeuvre and the joystick controls are easy to get to grips with. The use of two types of weapon select is a great idea; you don't have to be sat right on top of the keyboard while you play.

The difficulty level is set just right; you'll start to advance through the game at quite a quick pace but thankfully not too rapidly which was the real down mark against Alien Breed. Things are neither too hard nor too easy, making it a joy to play.

Slinky, sultry and sexy is what Uhura is. Yes, it's the one and only Jane. Or is it? You know it's amazing what effects

This is the accolade given to those games of exceptional quality and which the Games-X reviewers feel deserve extra recognition

Space. The final frontier. The classic sci-fi series Star Trek has reached the 25th Anniversary milestone. Can the computer game do it justice or will it be as brilliantly naff as the original? Beam me up!

t seems an age-long mission since Star Trek, the game, was first mooted in the computer press. Now it has finally arrived is it as tempting to play or is it just like the two previous average Star Trek licences or any of the PD Star Trek games, with knobs on?

For the uninitiated few to the Star Trek phenomenon, you play the role of Captain James T Kirk as captain of the Starship Enterprise.

In the game you're faced with the same command problems, only now it's your butt on the line. Can you cope?

None of your fancy Jean Luc Picard nonsense here, just the original camp crew hamming it up to perfection with snug fit polyester/nylon combos.

Lighting and colours have been well researched, bringing the palette close to the original. Stark lighting effects are achieved to such perfection that the characters in the game have no shadows - just like in the TV series!

IT'S LIFE, JIM

Being a stickler for detail can backfire, but it is essential to get the full ooze of the series transferred to the computer screen. Here it succeeds.

You'll come across the major league characters: Spock, Bones, Scotty, Mr. Sulu, Uhura and Chekov, plus some minor alien fodder.

They look, talk, act and actually walk in the same way as their human counterpart in the series too. For instance, Bones McCoy is a right old misery, forever complaining about the weather and whining to Spock.

Arguments between them are rather inspired, you have no control but it adds an element of realistic atmosphere.

THE DILITHIUM CRYSTALS, CAP'W. THEY'RE GANNA BLOW!

A trusty ensign, 'alien fodder', brushes Kirk aside from impending death, only to be splattered himself. What a hero! Kirk sits down and has a cuppa, safe in the knowledge that he has delegated well...

Aspects of role-playing, strategy and adventure games, with a sprinkling of arcade thrills, are dragged to the fore and certainly make it challenging.

You can make a meal of earlier missions and continue, but you'll lack full experience and your task will be made trickier for later episodes.

The game is a user-friendly icon affair, split into two main areas of play on the ship's bridge.

Besides dealing with starfleet battles and general planning before a series, vou can also explore numerous planets set in orbit around the 20 available suns.

The latter part makes the game that

This control interface may seem a trifle awkward at first, but once you've got to grips with it you could teach brain-dead slugs to take over.

Actual starbattles are fun for a time but really depend on the processor speed of your PC. You definitely need a good mouse driver or joystick to achieve the full effect.

Using the keyboard is possible, but hardly advisable for a fast 'n' hectic phase like this

One of the main downers lies with the speed of installation. It's absolutely snail-like, even on high end PCs, and can take anything up to three hours before you can actually begin playing. It's a shame, but it's the price you pay for a whopping game like this.

Software House: Electronic Arts Development Team: Interplay

Star Trek is vast; a massive game with so many BM PC possibilities, options and problems it could all so easily have ended up with egg on its face.

Thankfully it doesn't, engrosses you in a story which you could honestly spend weeks on as your favourite alter ego.

Graphics are excellent, clear and concise, yet in no way contrived. The spritely figures look relatively basic but achieve the desired effect well.

The backdrops are extremely bright and colourful, up to the expected quality of VGA.

With a soundboard, the sonics are what you'd expect, crisp and clear. Depending on your soundboard, you'll be able to hear all manner of funky (?) Star Trek backdrops.

You'll be listening to pings and shwooshes like a true trekkie. Absolutely splendid stuff.

As a game it's certainly engrossing, yet by no means is it easy. It's tough and brain tickling so you've got to keep an open mind.

Selecting from the choice of possible answers in your conversations is a nice touch but you've got to be wary of what the outcome will be.

The movement and control via icons is hardly novel, but the manner in which it's done is excellent.

The large control icon plays better than others, such as the Sierra interface, and really allows you to get into the game in no time at all, once vou've mastered it.

There is one major criticism though. I can't recommend buying this if the processor speed of the PC is below 16 megahertz, in which case it gets tediously slow.

Also, ensure you've got a decent mouse driver or two. We encountered many a difficulty and think it's only fair to give you forewarning.

However, if you love Star Trek and ant a game to indulge your fantasies in, then this may be what you've been looking for, complete with terrific scope, a sense of humour and a wide variety of things to do.

Celebrate the anniversary and you can play this game, replay episodes and fight battles for many a long month to come in space, the final frontier.

It's time for the ride of your life in this week's Console Connexions, as we give you the low-down on the first Mega Drive art package to hit the streets.

OLY NEWS

THE GAME BOY DESIGNER

AscII has recently released the ultimate Game Boy carry case. Aptly titled the CarryAll Deluxe, this mammoth piece of ABS plastic will keep your Game Boy and virtually all the peripherals in a single compact case.

The hold can store the Game Boy itself, plus 12 cartridges and four spare battery cells for which it has spaces. The rechargeable battery may also be thrown in, along with the Wide Boy magnifying lens.

The stereo earphones which come bundled with the Game Boy are stored next to the video game unit, while the game link cable is all but a few inches long. Finally, an AC recharger cable is located at the top, should you own one

You can either carry the case by the plastic handle on the top, or with the adjustable shoulder strap thrown around your arm.

The case itself is tastefully decorated in the same greys as the Game Boy and has the words Game Boy sprayed in blue on the front.

Where can I get one of these, you may wonder. Simple, just contact Console Concepts on 0782 759712 and you'll be supplied with one for £20.00.

ART ALIVE

Art Alive is the commercial package for the Mega Drive and is a simple-to-use art and animation studio on which you can draw and animate anything you fancy on your pixelised canvas.

With the cursor, choose from eight types of artist media: line-draw, spray can. eraser and the pencil.

You have а palette of 16 colours to use at vour discretion.

plus four patterned fills with which to colour your masterpiece.

The line and pencil option will normally only draw a line a single pixel wide, although there are numerous thicknesses that can be selected.

A BUDDING ROLF HARRIS?

Having drawn your picture, you can then do numerous things to it. The first is to cycle through the 16 colour palette which will also change the colours on your drawing.

Though this doesn't actually do anything, it's psychedelic, man!

Art Alive includes a selection of stamps with which to enhance your picture. They are predrawn sprites you can stamp over a background.

For instance, you can draw a seascape, then slap on the ready-to-go surfers for a realistic Summer Bay scene.

A number of animations have also been included and you can feature Sonic on any of your pics. You can create your own animations if you so wish.

Having experienced the likes of DPaint on the Amiga, I found Art Alive to be a little disappointing.

You only have a 16 colour palette which does limit your imagination somewhat, and I must admit that a mouse is much nicer to use than a joypad when it comes to pixel art.

The animation is great and overall the package is simple to use despite the only way to save a picture being to link your Mega Drive to a video and save it out on tape - hardly convenient.

On the whole, not an outstanding piece of software, but then again it's the only one of its kind.

FOOTBALL FR

hitting American football on the Neo Geo. As you may guess, the game is going to be outstanding every respect on a machine of this calibre.

Rather than opting for true-to-life players and teams, you have here a cartoon graphic style and eight imaginary teams.

This 48 meg cartridge can be played by one or two competitors, providing vou have two control sticks. American football is a game of four quarters, with each one lasting 90 seconds, 3 minutes, 5 minutes or 10 minutes.

The game has four difficulty settings, ranging from beginner, normal, MVS (arcade difficulty), and hard.

Choosing your team is the next step to success, a low-down of each one can be found in the manual. The Bullets are the current league leaders, although the Bisons are only just behind.

NO PAIN, NO GAIN

The game will start in the quarter-finals, meaning you have a mere three matches before you can hopefully progress to become league champions.

To advance to the next stage in the competition you must win your game. Lose or draw and your trek for the title will be lost.

Your team will normally start by receiving the ball. The computer will punt the ball into your half, and one of your receivers will catch it.

LET'S PLAY BALL

You have four attempts, known as downs, to get the ball 10 yards. Do this, and the downs are reset and another 10 yards are measured from where the ball last dropped.

You can either run or pass the ball. Running is great for short yardage gains, say about four or yards, whereas five passing can get the ball over the 10 yard mark, providing you catch it first time, that is.

Having chosen the type of play you desire, the line of scrimmage will appear on screen Button A will hike the ball back, and the action begins.

From now on. tapping A will the ball make carrier run that little faster. Buttons B. C and D throw the ball to one of your three receivers. The moment the QB lets go, control is automatically switched to the receiver you're throwing to.

Providing you catch the pass, you can keep running, susing A once more to build up speed. On the defensive side of the game, the only button you need to use is A.

Tapping it fast increases the power of a punt, kick-off or field goal attempt, and is used when trying to bring the other side down. No matter how good a game is, I would never pay £120 for it.

I personally agree that Neo Geo is a wonderful machine and if I had the cash I'd probably buy one.

> Anyway. absolutely loved Football Frenzy. everything about it is outstanding.

Gameplay is just like a dream and although the rules of American football initially seem a little daunting, this cart recreates the pigskin action and simplifies it so even a beginner could understand the game fully.

The graphics are some of the best

I've seen, featuring superbly animated beefy cartoon sprites while the sound, mainly a full running commentary, is again first-class.

If you've got a Neo Geo you're probably loaded and can afford to pay out this much cash for a single product. I therefore suggest you take a look at Football Frenzy - it's one of the best 24bit games I've experienced.

Having triumphantly scored a TD, your team attempts the extra point

mighty sword of Warsong has been passed down through the ages from leader to leader. The power of this sword is unlimited, or so the people say, and no one is going to doubt them since it has lasted longer than 300 years.

Warsong is so powerful that it could destroy the world with its strength.

Therefore it was decided to keep it safely tucked away from all people with evil intentions. The lucky clan to inherit this sword was the family known as Baltia.

However, the evil emperor Pythion has craved the sword for years and has finally decided to take it for himself.

He has ordered his armies to attack the home castle of Baltia and steal the sword.

UNDER SIEGE

The game begins as the Pythion army has just broken through the castle gates. It is now down to you to stop it from advancing near to the sword.

This task is performed using various strategic plans and moves to wipe out the many advancing units.

You control two units. Both of these, when selected, can perform various

The castle is under attack, but the Mermen guard the moat from the charging army tasks such as cast magic spells, move about the castle grounds, take a defensive hold, or go all out and attack a nearby enemy unit. Whatever they do, the choice is yours.

When thev have performed their turns you can select a semiautomatic turn which, to be honest, seems more like fully automatic.

This performs the remaining moves and turns for the rest of your army, taking you through various battles and strategic set-ups.

After your army has finished all its moves then it is your turn to sit back and gnaw away at your nails as the enemy units perform their turns and start to wipe you out, unit by unit.

As you may guess, the game is a little on the hard side to begin with.

> However. perseverance it will soon turn out to be fairly addictive and although wiping out the enemy is far from easy there are a number of difficulty levels to keep you on vour toes.

This definitely not the hardened arcade addict since it requires plenty of thought and cunning.

IT'S A ROUGHIE-TOUGHIE!

If you are after something with loads of action and easy to play on your first go, then stick to Sonic for this is not for you.

Graphics are great when compared to other games in the field and the choice of two views, a close-up a longer range one of the surrounding area, adds variety to the proceedings. All the various battle scenes move quickly and are over in a matter of seconds, so you needn't worry about the outcome for too long.

There are also plenty backgrounds to these scenes, each significantly different to the next.

Sound is good with realistic effects and a decent enough atmospheric tune that doesn't get annoying too soon. All in all it is safe to say that this is a very well presented game.

Gameplay is also a success and strategy fans should undoubtedly adore it. A worthwhile purchase for those who enjoy a thought-provoking game although it can get boring after a while due to the lack of scenarios.

Movement is simple. Just place the foot

CHASE HQ

Tearing up those quiet country lanes in a desperate bid for justice

The arcade machine of Chase HQ is still regarded as one of the best driving games ever produced. Sadly it has suffered from poor. inadequate interpretations onto the home computers - even the ST and Amiga versions leave a lot to be desired!

You assume the role of an undercover police driver, racing along the city streets through five perilous levels in your suped-up Porsche 928.

Each level sees you chasing after some drug dealer or master thief in an attempt to run them off the road and bring them to justice.

Needless to say, they are all driving equally fast motor vehicles like Ferraris and Lotus' although it must be said that you are kitted out with three turbos to use in the chase.

LET'S GO MR DRIVER

The roads are littered with civilian drivers and various hazards, all of which slow your car down a little if a collision occurs.

You are then given the opportunity to sacrifice some of your score to buy some add-ons before starting out on the next level

Each stage does the traditional 'OutRun split' where the road will fork off in two directions, leaving you to choose the quickest route to take.

Thankfully this choice is made drastically easy by a rather large arrow floating high in the sky when you approach the split.

Of all the conversions I've seen of this game, the Game Gear version is one of the best.

The road moves at a fair old pace and all the vehicles and items on it look OK and move smoothly.

Sound fairly good too despite the tune playing throughout being abysmal.

One annoying point to the game is that your car will be central one minute with the road staying in the middle, but the car moves faster when the road sticks, thus lending potential for an accidental crash.

The addictive quality of the arcade machine has not been implemented here and the number of credits you get makes completing the game simple.

In terms of value it isn't up to much but what there is is fast and fairly enjoyable. Recommended, but not to fans of the arcade machine.

Well, well, here's something new a puzzle game on the Game Boy! A Mazing Tater sees you controlling, of all things, a spud!?!

What, I hear you ask, is this spud doing with his life? Well, he's on a quest to become a knight, like you do!

This objective will take him through many levels of thought-provoking puzzles while testing his brain to the full.

SPUD-U-LIKE

Before he embarks on his quest he can have a brief lesson from Mato Tomato on how to negotiate his way through each room encountered and the purpose of various items, ie, whether they are a help or a hindrance.

Along the way you'll come across rotating doors that must be pushed to allow you to pass, holes which you are unable to cross, and blocks which you either push well out of the way or push into the holes.

When your lessons have finished, it is then time for you to attempt the puzzle section of the game.

This takes you through 10 floors filled with rooms. When completed you'll have become a knight and deserve time for a bit of fun after all that hard work.

Now you get the opportunity to move onto the best mode of the lot and take part in either the mega picnic or the puzzle forest.

The picnic takes the form of a race in which you have to complete each level in as fast a time as possible. For the forest section you'll have to try and get Spud back out having entered the woodland and got lost.

There is also a lovely two-player link option used during practice mode. This is great fun and as you both compete to polish off the levels before the other player, arguments are guaranteed!

The graphics are small and not very detailed but thankfully they are all perfectly sized and placed for the game.

Every level looks startlingly similar to the previous one but they are all obviously different upon playing.

Soundwise there is plenty to grace your eardrums; a joily tune plays throughout, keeping in with the silly storyline. There are also a few spot effects to keep you from going crazy.

All in all this is an addictive puzzle challenge but not the best. That accolade is still held by Tetris for me, but if you are looking for a fun diversion away from the day to day bustle, then this is certainly worth a peek.

EXHAUST HEAT

Exhaust Heat is, as its name suggests, a racing game which is based around the Formula racing season. Usina legendary scaling and rotational hardware to the full, Exhaust Heat attempts to recreate the on-road action, F-Zero-style.

The season is set over 16 races, starting in sunny Italy and ending up in Japan. The courses featured are technically true to life, Mintendo SUPER FAMICOM:

pixelised representations of the real tracks, even right down to the very last chicane.

The game also includes a training option where you can DISTRIBUTION race on any of the 16 courses to improve your time. Otherwise you can start the season straight away.

Before the qualifying lap you have a set amount of money with which to purchase add-ons for your car.

By add-on, I don't mean nipping down to Dixons to buy the latest Pioneer car stereo, but rather new gearboxes and the like.

SPENDING WISELY

Starting in the lower price bracket, you can top your car up with nitro for £1000 or buy super hi-grip tyres for a little less.

More expensive luxuries come in the form of a larger rear or front wing, new air diffuser and active suspension.

When you've won a few races and saved up a fair wad of cash, you can opt for the expensive items like a brand-new chassis design or the latest V12 engine.

With a non-existent bank balance but a sparkling new car, you can drive out on the track and qualify for a position on the grid.

You have two laps with which to clock up the fastest time, and then you'll be placed on the grid according to how fast you were.

That done, you start the race. Your car will have four to seven gears, depending on how much cash you have spent on transmission.

Factors like grip, top speed and acceleration all vary according to the setup of your car.

Button B accelerates, Y slams on the brakes and A kicks in the nitro. The D-pad acts as your steering-wheel, while the Left and Right buttons at the top of the pad change through the gears.

Transmission is usually automatic, but despite this it's possible to use the gears to slow you down when approaching a hairpin bend.

probably notice that the computer drivers aren't particularly intelligent, but they will swerve around you when they overtake.

Should you clip wheels as you pass,

The small arrow on the right indicates the direction of the corner ahead you'll send the car into a stomachchurning spin, while the driver you touched will sail straight past as if nothing has happened.

JUST DESERVES

At the end of each race you will be awarded lots of lovely prize money; the better your final position, the more cash vou'll receive.

This is mainly used to restock your nitro supply and upgrade your car, although you may have to pay for repairs should you crash too many times.

Exhaust Heat is pretty impressive, using the rotational capabilities of the Famicom well and although the car sprites are a little poor, overall visually presentation is good. Sound is, to be quite honest, naff, with nothing more than the dulcet tones of the cars' engines to listen to.

This game proves to be fairly addictive. especially when the championship is at stake. It's a game which most will find fun to play.

Hoorah, you've beaten the opposition to come first and grab your bottle of booze

The track is empty during the qualifying lap, leaving you to notch up the fastest possible time and highest grid position

The hairpin really threw you, and your F1 spins out leaving back markers to stroll past

AYS OF THUNDE

Tom Cruise, was the crazed stockcar racer who promised to win Daytona in the hit movie, Days of Thunder. Of course, Top Gun Tom fulfilled his pledge, but that's Hollywood for you.

Do you possess the courage and skill needed to become a stock-car racer and win Daytona, to take the coveted championships away from superb drivers like Rowdy Burns and Russ Wheeler?

As Cole Trickle you must win Daytona, plus four other races. Should the first course will be Daytona, followed by Phoenix, Atlanta, Michigan and finally Miami.

Each race can be set over one to 40 laps, but before beginning you must first qualify in order to see where you start on the grid.

Button A operates the accelerator, B applies the brake and the D-pad represents the steering-wheel.

GET A GRIP

Each course is constructed of long, fast straights and banked curves, so if you use the corners well it is possible to bomb around the track at full speed.

Should you ram or crash into something, the car's damage will obviously increase. Take too many hits and you're out of the race unless you can get to the pits fast.

Entering the pits, indicated by a small arrow, allows you to replenish fuel supplies, as well as repair damage and change tyres.

The pit stop is against the clock, and you must change all four tyres in the fastest time possible. Having done that and removed the lacks, floor the gas pedal and rejoin the race.

> Days of Thunder is visually very basic, but that's why the game moves so fast and smooth.

> > Also accompanying the speeding action is the drone of the engine and the roar of other cars, along with an appropriate crash sound effect should you ram another driver.

Since more than just the Daytona track is included in Days of Thunder, there's plenty to keep you coming back to this excellent race game, time and time again.

Throughout each scene your aircraft will be attacked by waves of Russian

The guardians, usually in bomber or armoured vehicle, lob bullets in a spray towards you, as well as firing homing missiles which detonate on impact unless you can destroy them first.

I wasn't at all impressed with Task Force Harrier Ex, not because it is horrendously bad, but mainly because I've seen so many almost identical games. I therefore found this rather dull and repetitive.

Harrier Ex is visually uninspiring; the various small sprites are colourful but pretty simple.

OK, the guardians are large but I've seen plenty like them in numerous older games.

I can envisage a shoot'em-up freak enjoying this game but I'm sure anyone else will be as disappointed with this release as I was.

he original Turrican was hugely enjoyable product and I thought there was no way it could have been improved upon. I was wrong. T2 is every bit as playable as it's predecessor, if not more so.

The action doesn't veer greatly from the original with you running around shooting things while leaping about the platforms.

This time the programmers have also included a multi-directional section, spacecraft scrolling reminiscent of Scramble and the forthcoming Project X.

Graphically and sonically it is ithout a doubt Man Utd is the best football team on the planet! Not one, but two games have been dedicated to the team, more than any other in the football league.

The second of the two games is the best side-on

You have choice to both manage the team and play the games; the managerial section is in depth and simple to use but sadiy the arcade sequences leave a lot to be desired.

Fans of the team will undoubtedly be very disappointed, as I was.

ith a huge amount of flight sims already available on computer, you'd think that the last thing we need is another.

The main problem is that F-16 is very similar to so many other games in the style.

The vectors used are anything but smooth, insofar as they jerk around an incredible amount. Most of the time they distract you from the gameplay which, incidentally, would be excellent if the graphics were improved.

There is one good thing here however and that is the computer link option which allows you to battle against each other in the skies. However, not one for the die-hard flight sim fan.

Sadiy there is one thing that puts a dampener on it all - the difficult control method.

It takes ages to suss out the

3 Woodland House, Woodland Road, New Southgate,

Does anyone ever actually bother to read the intros at the top of this page? I spend a good five minutes trying to work out what on earth I'm going to say... and I bet noone really cares. I mean you probably already know that the address is: Tip-X, Games-X, Europa House, Adlington Park, Macclesfield SK10 4NP, don't you?

POPULOUS II - ELECTRONIC ARTS

LEVEL 301: UPTIAD

LEVEL 341: ITGHAG

LEVEL 381: LLLOAL

LEVEL 401: ETIT LEVEL 440: PIWOAB

LEVEL 483: HOACAK

We'll give you some more just as soon as we've got 'em!

THE POWER

Only got a few passwords for this weird 'n' whacky puzzle game but here goes anyway... They are GOODIE, CLOSET and XUQZOX. I have it on good authority from a chap called Bob that these work, but I can't be certain as some sod has 'alf-inched our copy from the office.

FANTASY WORLD C DIZZY - CODEMASTERS

Enter your name on the high score table as IMMORTAL and you'll find that our little eggy friend will become completely invincible! Cor! Brilliant... Now you can go and beat up all the bad guys.

PIT FIGHTER - DOMARK CE III FE

Start playing the game as usual and then type in LOBSTERS. If you now press any of the numeric keys you will jump to that level. If you press C you'll go to the championship level and pressing L takes you to the elimination round.

LOST PATROL CE

If you rest for exactly 50 minutes each time, your strength and morale will raise a couple of points, while all of the other men in the group will be restored up to a whopping great 99 per cent. Bit good that!

THUNDERJAWS

– Domark

What a completely rotten game this is! Eugh! I'm sure that some of you like it though, so I'll let you into a little secret. If you hold down the left mouse button and press S you can skip levels with the right mouse button.

Good grief, I'm so underwhelmed I'm going to have a little sit down...

Seldom is a film made into a good game, but Ocean has come up trumps. Level three is the hardest of the game where you must negotiate a labyrinth of air circulation ducts...

Before hitting this switch walk past and up to the door. The switch will open the next three doors and a lot of speed is required to get past them all. As soon as the door opens, run to the right and jump over the two vents, (see no five), stopping the fan halfway along. You should just make it through the last door

These two vents will suck you in if you just walk straight past, causing you to retrace your steps. This is very annoying so all you have to do is jump over them. They can also be used to have another try if you don't manage to get through all three doors

To get past these fire blowers a simple case of timing is required. Watch them once to see how many times they blow before a rest and the second time they do it go up and wait for the next one

These two fans have the off switch situated above them, simply jump up and launch a baseball at them to turn them off. Do this before opening the door and you should get past with ease

The first door switch can pose a slight problem when arriving here for the first time. If you try to hit it and then swing across the pipe, the door will shut as you advance. Cross the pit first and stand as far to the right of the platform as possible, then lob a baseball which should hit the switch

This guard is invisible to you right until you land on him, so don't just fall down the ladder past the fire blowers. However, he isn't exactly difficult to kill and one well-timed thump with the boxing glove will send him to his grave

These act very much in the same way as the fire blowers, only they blow upwards. Simply run past when they stop. If you don't you could get frazzled!

Turn off the fan to the right before opening the door with this switch; you won't have time to do it the other way round. Once through the door, jump across the ladder and collect the money bag up the next stairway

The sequence of these vertical blowers changes every game. Watch this and make a mental note, then run past, fire a baseball to the left and run right. The door should then open, allowing you to get past Launch a baseball in the direction of the caretaker over the other side of the hole and then jump over. Mistime the jump and you'll be fried, turned into a hotdog, and sold to some unsuspecting person on a street corner!

Above all else you must remember the four major mission objectives: Break the rebel supply, conquer the airbases, attack strategic installations and then destroy the rebel hq. Simple as that... now off you go.

AIR TO GROUND ATTACK

Remember the limitations of your weaponry! The cannon has 250 rounds of ammunition but, while it is fun to use, it is only really useful against 'soft' ground targets such as trucks, anti-aircraft sites and SAM sites. The best way to attack using the cannon is to approach in a shallow dive at

The S-240 rockets are a powerful weapon best utilized using similar tactics to the cannon. The rockets are ideal for taking out tanks or the smaller of the strategic installations

The AS-7 'Kerry' heat-seeking missile is used for attacking any major ground target. Keep low and designate the target you require with the Return key. Most targets will be destroyed with a single missile, although you will come across larger depots and stations that require multiple hits. Be conservative with your weapon usage. Try to make a major strike with the AS-7 and follow it up with a couple of S-240's

Don't forget that one of your primary objectives is to break the rebel supply line! If you see any crossing point over the river,

Follow the river and just knock out as many as you can. Beware though! Any trucks arriving at the bridges will be able to repair the damage. If you have time later on, try to follow some of the roads and pick off the convoys

TACTICS

Whenever you return to base, have a peak at the map to plot your progress. Remember that any installations destroyed will be taken over by the UN Peace Keeping force so you should soon see some progress on this tactical display.

Plan your route from here. Divide the map into quadrants and try not to stray

FLASHY FLYING

The tailslide is briefly outlined in the manual, but is a move that is a wee bit hard to get the hang of when you're first learning combat manoeuvres.

It's a stunt that is most useful in close combat when your enemy has managed to get behind you, but it takes a steady hand to stay in control of.

The best position to be in is at about 5-600 metres with your throttle at about 3/4. Pull back and go into a very steep climb. Try to get the plane as straight as you can without toppling over. While you're doing this pull off on the throttle and after you've climbed about 1,000 ft you should have run out of thrust.

The plane should now start to fall out of the sky! KEEP THE WINGS STRAIGHT.

The plane should simply fall back, and all you need do is pull back on the stick and apply full power as you see the horizon creeping up the screen. Your enemy should now be in front of you – fire away!

The biggest problem you'll encounter is trying to recover too soon. Follow these tips and you'll be OK

The most useful move in ground attacks is the ability to quickly turn around once you've overshot a target. Fly straight and level for a few moments, then perform a fast half loop, cut the power as you go over the top and then fly along (upside down) until you see the target.

Do a quick half roll to level out and whap on the brakes. Make sure the weapons are activated and then fire away. This move is explained with a diagram in the manual on page 49.

This is also dead useful if you overshoot when you're trying to land

AIR-TO-AIR COMBAT

There are two distinct targeting modes when using the AA-8 'Aphid' missiles. The first of these is the basic 'green lock' which is where the targeting computer has recognized the existence of a potential threat and is doing the best it can to track it.

If you unleash a missile at this point you have a 30-40 per cent chance of actually hitting your target, since it is more than likely that your missile would have to manoeuvre quite dramatically to home in.

If you are facing your target, your computer will register a 'red lock' on the target and show a red box on the HUD. As soon as you see the red box, fire an AA-8 and your target is guaranteed history!

When dogfighting, try to remember that the Mirage 2000's can only fire at targets in front of them. Never let one get behind you if you can help it! Use the moves outlined elsewhere to stay in control of any combat situation.

REMEMBER - Once a missile has gone past you, it can't turn around!

BECOMING A BIT LIMP

Every now and then, the enemy will get all cocky and you'll find a bunch of Mirage jets guiding you into a barrage of SAM fire. More often than not your radar will be the first to go, followed by your HUD.

your radar will be the first to go, followed by your HUD.

As soon as one goes, open up the throttle and get out of there! Get your bearings as quickly as possible and head back to base. Don't try to be heroic or they'll blow the crap out of you

Any possible claims of Northern bias can be thoroughly refuted this week as we coast on down to the nether regions of the country in order to pay a visit to Microland, Waterlooville, tucked away near Portsmouth.

Andy McCachie (24)

y mate and I play games on his Atari STE, I'm just looking for a decent twoplayer beat'em-up, but there seems to be less and less games available on the ST these days. Software shops are designating more and more shelf space to console and hand held games.

I used to go to the arcades when I was a kid, but even the coinops are pricey and there are fewer accumulated score machines these days and more token games, so you can't progress. I think my favourite coin-op conversion on the ST has to be Operation Thunderbolt.

Jim Hawkes (25)

still reckon the Amiga is going to be difficult to beat, but not only that, consoles are a closed face so you can't use them for anything other than games, so I'm going to stick with what I've got. I like air sims best but I also use the machine for music and art.

I'm keeping an eye out for B-17 from Microprose because all my simulations are of fighter planes. I was interested in the Virtual Reality flight sim on Tomorrow's World a while back - I think I'll definitely have to check that out can sit for hours playing Tetris on the Game Boy and no one can get a peep out of me. A friend's got a Sega and although I'm not really into arcade games, I like two-player sports games like Soccer. I think hand helds are pretty insular entertainment, but at least you're using your brain and reflexes, rather than vegetating in front of the telly.

e, i've got a Game Boy and an NES and I buy at least two or three games a month for the Game Boy, although I have to say I hardly touch the NES.

My favourite game is definitely Pro-Am Golf. I go to the arcades sometimes at the weekend and play carracing games.

Barry Benning (8)

or Christmas I got a Mega Drive, but the games are so expensive I'm only likely to get new ones on my birthday. My favourites are Double Dragon, Dick Tracy and Sonic the Hedgehog.

I wish they would drop the price of games and then kids would be able to buy more. I bought my Mega Drive because a couple of friends had one and at least we can each play the others' different games.

Robert Dunkley (10)

lot of my friends have got hand helds, mostly Game Boys and the most popular game at the moment is Super Mario so we sit around at breaks and lunch trying to beat the high score. I think Tetris is great and I'm saving up for Kung Fu 2 or T2. My mates and I have all got part-time jobs and generally we save up to buy games. I think there should be more TV programmes like Game Master.

definitely the best game I've ever played.

it's going to take ages for me to save up

But games cost so much money that

Brian Martin (18)

n Saturdays my friends and I usually meet up here and check out the new releases. I'm in a minority these days because I've still got a real computer, an STE and they've bought consoles and hand helds - although I have to admit, I've been thinking about buying a Game Boy because I travel on the train quite a bit and it's a bit of a yawn with nothing to do

he shop is stocking more and more console and hand held stuff every week, but we still service 8-bit and 16-bit customers with games and keep an eye on the magazines to see what's worth stocking.

Games-X being a weekly is really handy for checking out what to stock. On hand held we sell more Game Boy games than any other, but Nintendo and Sega console software sales are about 50-50. The ST market seems to be slowing down quite a bit but the Amiga is steady.

For the past decade airline pilots have undergone virtually all their flight training on the ground. Military pilots have practiced aerial combat in the most sophisticated of jet fighters without leaving airforce headquarters. How have they done this?

eading edge simulation technology is the name of the game and now, for the first time, the ever growing games playing public is allowed to get in on the act. For £3 for as many minutes you can experience the wonders of modern simulation.

The company behind such interactive entertainment Redifusion, a firm whose name up until now has been synonymous with both military and civil flight simulation and training.

Those of you who glimpsed Tomorrow's World several weeks ago will have a rough idea of how the unit looks. Basically it's a big red hydraulically supported shell in which two players can sit and play a simulation orientated game.

When the machine was previewed in London on the 3rd February it contained a multi-level flight combat game.

The player, or players, had to destroy a number of enemy installations before entering a giant volcano and blowing up the bad guys.

Despite being solely for demonstration purposes at the moment, this is a taster of things to come when the machine is unleashed in

What makes the Commander really special and sets it apart from other sit in units is that every little movement you make within the simulated 'world' is mimicked by the advanced hydraulics system.

This effectively manages to achieve a realistic sensation of actually being there' within the simulated world.

Once the system is released, Rediffusion is hoping to install these big red bouncing £45,000 eggs in sites other than the large arcades.

It is hoped that they can be used in an educational capacity in places such as museums, airports or theme parks.

A WWI flight simulator is envisaged as being the perfect attraction at a war museum such as Duxford where the customer can look around at the real-

OPERATION INTERFLORA
I think your page is absolutely BRILL, and you're even better. (I was paid to say that). (Were you? Not by me, I know you love the page and myself more than the world - X). Please, a million times, could you help me with Operation Stealth?

I have not got very far, only to the town in fact. I have changed my notes for coins and have bought some flowers.

I have given them to everyone but nothing seems to work. If you help I will promise to write to you to say how fab you are. (With a small fee of course).

Frank Garofano, Hove.

Dr X: No. no. no. Heck, what do you think I am? Paying for my own publicity! It is you should be paying me, you snivelling little punk! Nevertheless, I shall lower myself to answer your query.

By the way, a great deal of stealth is required in the game Xenon II. Basically, I like the look of the game, and you don't have to wear any carnations

On Operation Stealth you've got to think like a special agent and meet your contact. The classic way to do this is to pin a carnation to your jacket in order to dentify yourself.

Head to the park to meet this guy and get the info off him. When he's shot - it's a roughie-toughie life out there - search him, then dash off before the police arrive. Easy. Just watch a few B-Movie spy thrillers for further tips.

ITS A NIGHTMARE
Please help! I am stuck on Knightmare on Quest 2 for the Cup of Life. I've found only two keys. Whoever helps I will help them with tips or pokes, thanks!

Steve Bauer, Saffron Walden.

On Nick's recommendation here is a picture of Pinball Dreams, for no apparent reason other than he likes the game. Well, it's a Nightmare to play, so why not?

Dr X: Well, young Essex boy, fancy sending your query as a classified ad when you have the Guru of Games knowledge in the same mag. Honestly, some people have no idea.

I'll help this time because I'm feeling kind-hearted. You chaps from Essex have had some stick in the past, so I'll go easy. As it happens though, I do believe everything that I've heard.

The first key is through the black door, throw things through it.

hen step through it and make your way back. The second key is found at the bottom of the area with the stepping pads.

elcome back to my clinic for the gamingly insane. I've snapped out of the metaphysical dilemma I've been stuck in and, for the moment, I'm back to my good ol' cantankerous self, and because I'm feeling particularly obstreperous this week, I'm not even going to provide any helpful screen shots. So, you lousy runts, send in your queries, problems and dilemmas to me: Dr X, Games-X, Europa House, Adlington Park. Macclesfield SK10 4NP.

The third is carried by the creatures after the invisible wall maze, use the map. The fourth is near the mystic door, don't enter this, but throw items through it. Secret passages will appear where you can kill nasties to collect a key.

The fifth key is found on the places with the nine floor pads. Don't stand on these yet, but go to the recess near the bottom left. Stand out, avoid the fire balls, drop an item on the next one and continue on your way. The key should appear at the end of the path.

A WORD FROM AMIGA

Please, please, please can you help me? In Turtles, my friend and I can rescue Splinter and he tells us to get the blimp to chase the helicopter. Can you please tell us where the blimp is. O great one?

Blizziwigsipopsicle, Reading.

Dr X: The editor of Amiga Action has rather nastily told me to tell you to go away until you've grown up, but seeing as I'm feeling so generous I'll willingly proffer a few words of wisdom.

Rumour has it that the Mutant Ninja Turtles have been found lurking on the Microprose Golf courses. Well, to test that theory, here's a picture. There's a T-shirt for the closest answer. Or then again...

After rescuing Splinter, forget the blimp. You've got to enter the technodrome. There are three alternative entrances, so ensure you select the correct one. The two main guardians can be killed easily by attacking the weak spot, the head.

Then, having battled through countless levels, you'll come across Shredder. Simply stay on top, avoid his shots, and give him a good hiding when he leaps at you.

BUXOM WENCH GOES

I've been trying to play Elvira – Mistress of the Dark for a long time now but every time I go back for a fresh attempt I get stuck at the same old stages.

How do I kill the vampire, the fat woman cook and the hawk? I'm fed up that I can't get anywhere.

Linda Hetherington, Grantham.

Dr X: You're doing the right thing Linda, going back to the same old places again and again, hoping your mind will be clear. Unfortunately, that ploy often leaves you still stuck and frustrated at the same point.

To kill the vampire you need the old hammer in heart routine. Don't forget the hammer in the garden shed. Sweep up the mess, then deal with the hawk and you'll find something useful.

When in the kitchen, throw some salt, found in the torture room, over your shoulder. The salt is ever so useful and I recommend the purchase of the Saxa Salt tips booklet.

EAT MY CEMENT!

I have a tip and a question and since you're such a wonderful bloke, you'll help me.

First of all I will tell you of my sexy tip...(SNIP! None of that here, ta very much -X). Now for my query. (About time too - X).

How does one get past the cement on level two of the Simpsons? I have jumped onto all of the sweets but then I keep on falling. By the way the cheat for...(Arrgh! Go away! - X)

Since I sent you this letter on a sexy aerogramme you should definitely print it and give me a prize.

PS Games-X is the sexiest mag ever. This is my 15th letter so please print it. Chris Mainder, Middlesborough.

Dr X: You certainly witter on, no wonder your previous 14 letters have ended up in the bin. I shall help you though, but I refuse to put any 'sexy this' or 'sexy that' words in.

Jump onto the first red platform and then on the second which goes to the top of the screen. When this reaches the top, leap up and this should then trigger a hidden switch off the screen, thereby moving the platform along Simply stand on this to get over the pit. The next pit needs an extended jump with the fire button held down.

FW SO DIZ

CodeMasters has been the 8-bit budget king for ages now. However, it is beginning to carve a name for itself in the 16-bit market also with a whole host of great releases. It is set to release loads more games at the moment, here are just three of them...

1110 $ 1110 Y ELIVE $0 ED LILLER

he fifth Dizzy tale is being released exclusively in the Excellent Adventures package with no individual release announced as yet.

Daisy has been kidnapped while on mission of great importance – collecting cherries for Grand Dizzy's cherry pie – and put into a 100 year sleep. The only way she can be woken up is to be kissed by a prince, so it is up to you to become royalty.

This is a traditional Dizzy romp, complete with castles and a small but haunting forest. As usual there are plenty of puzzles for you to solve and characters to talk to, some of them far from friendly.

This is a most beautifully presented Dizzy game yet and despite the fact that the map is the smallest yet the challenge is as demanding as before.

Prince of the Yolk Folk looks like the best Dizzy adventure yet and you can expect a review in Games-X very soon.

SUPER SEVILOUS

eymour is a movie star and he is set to lead in a whole range of movie games.

The first sees him taking on the role of a Super Hero.

One day Seymour was walking along the street when he was sucked into a phone box.

When he reappeared he was wearing a cape and mask and he had the new found ability to fly. Without further ado Seymour decided to save the world by getting rid of all dangerous substances.

You control our hero in an environmentally sound game.

Seymour must rid the world of toxic waste and this is performed simply by picking up the canisters in a certain order on the platform-filled screens.

There are many levels to battle through each with a different background and various nasties patrolling the area.

The game is a cross between Bomb Jack and Mario. If you are getting tired of Dizzy then Seymour is the guy for you!

he sixth, and latest, of the Dizzy series sees you once again trying to rescue the Yolk Folk, however this time their predicament is all your fault due to you thoughtlessly miscasting a spell.

This has trapped all your pals in an underground complex of caverns and it is up to you help.

Rescuing your friends isn't going to be easy; you must get a belonging of each one and take it back to the wizard to let them out. These possessions range from Denzil's Walkman to Dylan's Vibes (!?!) and are collected from the characters.

This is the biggest Dizzy adventure yet devised with more screens than Fantasy World and Magicland put together, and there isn't a castle anywhere to be seen!

Spellbound Dizzy is being programmed by Optimus software and will also be exclusive to the Excellent Adventures package for a while.

5TH-11TH MARCH 1992 GAMES-X 41

Sneaky Peek

Wipe the grit from your eyes and take careful aim at the bomb target. This is an all-important manoeuvre; inaccuracy could lead to the loss of many innocent civilian lives, while success could have a major impact on the outcome of the war simulation of B-17 Flying Fortress is due to roll out of the Microprose hangar in April, a stunning simulation of this enormous, ungainly bird which proved to have been such a devastating factor to the outcome of World War II.

Watching a squadron of giant B-17 Super Fortress bombers rumble down the runway, struggle up from the ground and then darken the skies must have been quite an awesome sight.

The massive bomb load literally forced the huge wings downwards onto wheels beneath the wing tips.

The list of fighter aircraft simulations is endless, perhaps because the speed and action associated with doglights and aerial assaults seem to be better suited to a game rather than a lumbering, long haul flight of a bombing mission.

HELPING HAND

Microprose has set out to quash this theory once and for all. Taking a closer look at B-17 Super Fortress, the first thing that strikes you is the close comradeship and teamwork involved when perfecting a bomber command.

Piloting a fighter plane you're on your own, apart from radio contact, whereas a squad of 10 is required to fly a B-17: pilot, co-pilot, communication, navigation, weaponry and gunners in three positions throughout the plane.

With so many different posts to fill, there is great opportunity for communication and role-playing within the simulation; you can switch from station to station to check navigation and plot the course to the target.

Character and individuality are also very important; you can even have the option to choose the paintwork and design for the nose-cone of the B-17.

In the heat of battle, members of the crew may be injured or even killed and you will then have the task of As senior officer, one of your many responsibilities is to make all the crew members capable of taking over any post if necessary; this is achieved through a squad selection and training feature, quite separate to the mission scenarios.

MASTER OF THE COCKPIT

The design team decided that as commanding officer you adopt the position of pilot, although you are allowed to switch to navigator or radio operator during the mission.

If not, the computer will monitor all positions despite human performance being far In addition to the comradeship within the plane itself, you are part of a squadron. As you gain more experience the computer relinquishes more and more control and you could end up taking charge of the whole squadron on a mission.

The realism in the form of historic and geographic facts and information and real-life missions, is backed up by a total 3D environment system with bitmap articulation showing specific ground detail.

This 3D environment can also be viewed from different perspectives in the plane such as that of the bomber, navigator and pilot.

The slower pace and the extensive planning and numerous roles have given the design team sufficient space and time to create both character and atmosphere.

Furthermore, Microprose reckons that the controls and instrumentation are the most accurate and realistic ever, quite a claim from the premier purveyor of air sims.

Like its subject, this simulation is awesome, combining atmosphere and character with realism.

8-17 Super Fortress will be available on the PC in April and on the Amiga and ST in June or July '92.

Peter Banning is a successful, middle-aged lawyer. A genuine high-flyer, Peter will do anything to gain more wealth and power.

Unfortunately his desire to be the top man reaches far beyond anything or anyone and the last straw comes when Peter misses his young son's first baseball match for a business meeting.

Having returned with his wife from a seminar, Peter discovers that his children have been kidnapped.

Believing the felony to be the nasty work of some small-time extortionist, Peter calls the authorities who simply register the children as missing persons.

It isn't until he is visited by Tinkerbell that Peter discovers the truth as to the childrens' location – Never Never Land, a place crammed full of blood-thirsty pirates, sexy mermaids and little boys who just don't want to grow up.

Once within the realms of Never Never Land Peter must confront the dastardly Captain Hook and save his children before working out how to return home.

Still, don't just let me tell you about it, go out and see the movie for yourself.

The game itself centres around a series of puzzles that need to be solved. One such problem sees Peter needing to acquire various pieces of pirate attire.

One scene sees
Peter meeting up with a pirate renowned for getting drunk. What's more, when the fellow gets drunk he removes his clothes! Discovering this valuable information Peter must ply

the scoundrel with beer before making off with his trousers!

HOOK, LINE AND SINKER

The screen is split into two sections, the upper one displaying what's going on and the lower one containing all the control icons. The programmers have decided to try and cut down on all the possible commands, leaving only crucial ones such as; Walk To, Use and Talk To.

The graphic artists have gone to great lengths to ensure that the game will be visually stunning.

Attention to detail paramount and the backdrops will definitely catch your eye.

Ocean's Hook is on course for the end of April and will be available on the PC, ST and Amiga.

Peter will need to collect all manner of goodies if he is to succeed in his mission. What have we here?

The control panel that makes up the lower part of the screen is made up of these intricate graphics

If there was one thing that scared the daylights out of Captain Hook it had to be this menacing croc

All your problems can be solved by me, Dr X. (Pardon? - Unc) Write to: X-IT, Games-X, Europa House, Adlington Park, Macclesfield, Cheshire SK10 4NP.

OUR CLAS

GROVEL I have a very sad story of the for you. On Friday 21st of February I went up to my local shop to buy my weekly copy of Games-X. I went to the shelves and picked up my beautiful copy and I noticed that I got the last one so I felt quite chuffed with myself.

I bought it and on the way home I decided to have a peek inside, but to my horror a sudden gust of wind took it right out of my hands.

I chased my poor copy of Games-X for several miles before I caught up with it, but I was too late. my poor mag was torn to pieces and I have been crying all weekend.

I think that a Games-X T-shirt would cheer me up (preferably a medium size). Also, next time I go to purchase my weekly copy of Games-X I could put it up my T-shirt to protect it.

PS Here is what remains of my poor issue 43 of Games-X.

Alan Etherson, Glasgow.

Will you lot stop at nothing to get a Tshirt? Chasing a copy of the mag for miles indeed? Do you think I'm stupid? (If you really want me to answer that ... - Doc). Well for your cheek and imagination there's a Tshirt in the post.

ADORATION SOCIETY

Sir (hmm, I like that, please carry on -Unc), is it true that STs are beginning to die down? Loads of people in my school own STs and I was thinking of getting Should I get an Amiga or an ST? Please help!

PS I have just dislocated my elbow and I am in a sling for three weeks. It took me ages to write this so a T-shirt would be Jagveer 'Life Long Fan of Unc X' Mundra, Mickleover, Derby.

The number of STs which have been sold has declined and this has resulted in less software being produced for the ST.

If you want to use your machine for other applications, such as MIDI or programming, the ST is probably your best bet. If you want a computer just for games then go for the Amiga. In the end it's all a matter of how much you've got to spend.

BIG NO NO

It is obvious piracy is an ever increasing problem and it is the last thing software houses need with the recession, but what I cannot understand is why they don't put locks on the disks so it would be impossible to copy them?

I admit it must be very tempting if someone offers you a pirated version of a game that you were going to buy in the

THE FINAL NIGHTMARE

Am I alone in my disappointment with end-of-game sequences? Many a time I have completed a painstaking game to be rewarded with very little.

For example, Starglider 2 offers nothing but 'Congratulations' at the bottom of the screen. Many other games are similar: Robocop, The Untouchables, Strider, to name but a few. Surely after slaving away at a game a just-reward is deserved. So come on software houses give us hard working gamers something a little more spectacular.

PS is World Class Soccer for the Lynx as good as it looks, and when will it be out? PPS Gimme a game for my Lynx.

PPPS On second thoughts just gimme one of those Super Famicoms that you have lying around in the Games-X office.

Andrew Robinson, Bideford, N Devon.

Don't worry, you're not alone. After spending weeks or months (hours or days in my case - Doc) playing a game to completion I totally agree that something more than a 'well done' is warranted.

I'm afraid that until the programmers acknowledge this fact and produce the end sequences that dreams are made of you'll just have to make do with the satisfaction that you've finished the game.

As far as football games go, I'd go for Manchester United Europe in preference to World Class Soccer, both of these are due out at the end of April.

How did you know that of the numerous Famicoms we've got littering the office, there are at least two per person - how tedious!

shops for £25. But people must remember that piracy is a criminal offence and someone has worked hard to produce this item of software that you are stealing.

John Mather, Swindon, Wiltshire.

Software houses face the huge problem of how to eradicate piracy, and if there were some easy and simple way to deal with the issue it would have been implemented long before now.

At the moment Ocean is experimenting with a dongle. This fits in the back of the computer and is needed before a game can be played. The problem here is the expense of the device resulting in games costing more.

ETURN OF THE Q & A

As a proud owner of an Atari Lynx I wonder if you could help me. My friend told me that Pitfighter was going to be released for the Lynx and I have a few questions to ask.

1. Will all the characters of the original coin-op version be included in the Lvnx

2. Are the graphics digitized?

3. Will it be a two-player comLynxed?

I think the Lynx is the best hand held around at the moment, and hope the game Pitfighter will be brilliant.

PS I wouldn't mind a T-shirt seeing as I read your magazine every Thursday.

Scott Jeakings, Luton, Beds.

Pitfighter is due for release at the end of April, although we haven't seen the

This week is "women looking mean" week and both Jane and Pam have been seen sporting rather fetching headbands and running around the office inviting us not to push them.

Obviously they have had something slipped in their drinks at the weekend!

While all this was going on Sharon, our very friendly office bilinguist, has been earning a bit of extra dosh on the side by speaking French over the 'phone! What she has been saying is beyond us but she's been getting more visits from strange men as a result.

Dear Mr or Mrs Newsie, Please would you reserve/deliver a copy of Games-X every week for:

Name....

Post Code.....

Note to newsagent: Games-X is available on a sale or return basis from UMD - tel: 071 700 4600 game it's more than likely that all the characters found in the original will make their way to the small screen.

That's as much as I can tell you at the mo but keep an eye out for more news in Console Connexions. As for the T-Shirt, not this time!

CREATIVE URGES

I've got an A500 and I am wondering whether I can purchase a shoot'em-up construction kit as I had it for the good ol' 64 and it was quite good.

Could you also tell me what price it is?

PS The piccy is of my brother's bedroom with our computer in it. See the Lotus box? Well thanks to you and the gang I won that in issue nine by drawing a racing track for Lotus 2.

Brendan Baker, Whitbourne, Worcester.

You're in luck because GBH Gold will be releasing the desired item sometime during the next couple of months for the very agreeable price of £9.99.

Let's get down to another matter: the state of your brother's bedroom! Dear oh dear! It looks like something has been dropped on it from a great height.

Oh, and don't give me the old 'Everything is strategically placed' routine, it won't work.

CAN YOU FIX IT?

1. I own an Atari STFM and my friend owns an Amiga 512. The sound seems a lot better on his machine for a lot of games. Why?

2. Can ST owners upgrade their sound? If so how much does it cost?

Robin Crosby, West London.

The reason for the better sound is the more sophisticated sound chip which the Amiga has. To get the same quality you're going to have to go and trade in your ST for an Amiga.

BLACK BOX

You had some info in your mag about the so-called Lynx Black Box, but last time I went to my local Lynx stockist he had a spokesperson from Atari there who said that he had never heard of the Black Box, why is this?

Scott O'Connel, Crewe, Cheshire.

The Black Box is used by Atari to take the image from the Lynx and send it to a TV or monitor. The bad news is that it will probably never be available commercially due to its prohibitive price.

COLOUR CLASH

I have been buying this great wee mag from when it first appeared on my newsagent's shelf, and consider myself to be one of your faithful few. But I must say something! Has that walking tailor's nightmare Dr X got an identity problem or what?!

The dude has been dressed in, and has had his hair dyed in, more colours than Rolf Harris's paint brush. His head looks like a half sucked peardrop turned upside down, with a dicky bow glued to it.

Not only that, but he is more snotty to people who write to him than a six-year-old with a cold! Apart from him, your mag is totally brilliant.

I even read Dr X's page when I am in bed at night when I can't sleep. It does the trick every time.

PS Please Unc X don't send me a Tshirt, but my dad who buys his own copy of Games-X. He can't write but he reads like a bookworm and is dying for one.

Any size will do, but large or extra large would be great. He wants to frame it and hang it in the toilet. Please make an old man happy.

Stephen Cowan, Newtown Abbey, Northern Ireland.

I couldn't agree with you more, in fact I was thinking just the other day...

(Just a minute here you two, do you think that you can get away with slanderous comments like these. Stephen 'Smart Alec' Cowan, just go to a mirror and take a look at what you see. Yeuch, not very nice is is? Has anyone ever told you that... – Doc)

Excuse me, I think we'll stop this right here. See what you mean about the peardrop though! But I don't think you've got much to talk about as far as style is concerned, have you?
